

ORIGINAL TIMPO

(England) (Discontinued) 54mm soft plastic figures and hard and soft plastic accessories.

Following in the footsteps of Britains' "Swoppet" line, Timpo created a range of "Swap-type" figures in the 1970s which is among the most popular lines we sell. Using a secret method (now lost forever) in which various colored plastics were fused together into one figure, Timpo created the first fully colored soldiers without the use of paint. This unique process avoided the chipping, fading and other signs of aging that painted plastic figures had experienced. These "later swoppet-esque" figures are the best known of Timpo's soldiers, and include Romans, Foreign Legion, Arabs, Vikings and 7th Cavalry. Timpo has always been very popular among collectors. Few serious enthusiasts are without a sampling of this line in their collections.

MEDIEVAL SERIES

These are the best-sculpted 54mm knights and Vikings we've ever seen, and their colored plastic gives them a feel of detail unknown in the field outside of Britains Swoppet Knights.

Crusaders

Each swap-type Crusader is composed of a top half, a bottom half, a base, a weapon and, in most cases, a shield. They wear chain mail armor from head to foot, with only their faces showing, and are dressed in white crusader surcoats with a red cross on the chest. Their shields also display a red cross.

Multi-Colored Knights

This was Timpo's last range of knights, and its most exciting. Each figure is completely different from the next, not just in pose, as the Crusaders are, but in colors, shield and surcoat design. (Excellent-mint)

Vikings

These are our favorite Timpo figures. Dashing sea-rovers with wild hair, shirts made of animal skins or chain mail, a variety of helmets and weaponry which includes huge Danish axes, these are the very essence of imagination coupled with technical achievement. Each swap-type Viking is composed of a top half, a bottom half, a weapon and, in a very small percentage of cases, a shield.
