

HO — SOLDIERS, ACCESSORIES, VEHICLES

HO Scale Figures

For many years, HO figures were considered the runts in the toy soldier collector's litter. Their sculpting was often questionable, their subject matter was extremely limited, and very few new sets were released in any given year.

But during the renaissance of toy soldier manufacture which has blossomed over the past decades, HO figures have played an important part. There are now over a dozen international manufacturers, and their steady output, led by Zvezda, Hat, Italeri and Imex, has reshaped the HO collecting world into a vibrant and well-rounded environment. Collectors now have a vast choice of eras in which to frolic, and such heretofore overlooked campaigns as Alexander's Conquests, the Rise and Fall of Rome, the Ascent of the Mongols, the Imperial Expansion of the 19th Century Colonialists and World War I are now being addressed.

Toy Soldier Scales

Some customers may not be aware of the big size difference between HO and 54mm scale figures. The picture at right is a graphic illustration of the difference.

Q: What is HO scale?

A: 1/72nd (25mm) through 1/87th scales (20mm) are considered HO.

Q: How does HO differ from other scales?

A: HO is small, averaging is about .75 inches tall (25mm, the height of a thumb nail). 54mm averages 2.25 inches.

Q: Can I use HO figures and accessories with 54mm, 60mm and 70mm figures and accessories?

A: No. The average HO figure is 1/3 the height of most larger soldiers, the only way they could be used together would be in a "Gulliver's Travels" scenario.

Q: What are the advantages and disadvantages of collecting HO figures?

A: 1) Some people just like the fact that HO figures are tiny. This is an issue of taste, more than advantage. 2) HO figures require less room for storage. 3) HO figures are very inexpensive by the pose (an average of only a few pennies each, versus about 50 cents to a dollar for 1:32nd scale). 4) In some eras, most notably Ancient, Napoleonic and WWII, HO figures offer more range than 1:32nd scale. 5) On the other hand, some people prefer the greater "heft" of larger scale figures, are disturbed by the ease with which HO figures tend to fall over if a tabletop is nudged, and find the bigger figures easier to paint.

HO (25mm) vs 1:32nd (54mm)
